

By Ella

Why the sky is blue
The sun's light hit the earth's atmosphere, where the light is scattered by oxygen and nitrogen in the air. The blue light is scattered a lot more than the green and red so the sky turns blue.